Eternity & Oranges (Pitt Poetry Series) Christopher Bakken

“We’d not slept in days, or else we were/ still sleeping—who could tell?” someone asks in the opening poem of Eternity & Oranges. The voices we encounter in this book speak on the verge of disappearance, from places marked by disintegration and terror. Christopher Bakken's poems are acts of conjuring. They move from the real political landscapes of Greece, Italy, and Romania, into more surreal spaces where history comes alive and the summoned dead speak. In the formally diverse long poem, “Kouros/Kore,” but also in this book’s terse and harrowing dream songs, Bakken writes with devastating force, at every turn “Guilty of the crime of praise” while “begging for an antidote to beauty.”

Tim Gonzalez:

As a college student exactly feel bored to reading. If their teacher requested them to go to the library or even make summary for some publication, they are complained. Just small students that has reading's internal or real their hobby. They just do what the professor want, like asked to go to the library. They go to generally there but nothing reading significantly. Any students feel that looking at is not important, boring as well as can't see colorful images on there. Yeah, it is for being complicated. Book is very important in your case. As we know that on this period of time, many ways to get whatever we would like. Likewise word says, many ways to reach Chinese's country. So , this Eternity & Oranges (Pitt Poetry Series) can make you truly feel more interested to read.
